JOHN DERRIG FORCED TO LEAVE

Owing to poor health, John D. Derrig, who for the past two years has been manager of the Pioneer Fruit company, has been forced to give up his work in this city and leave Ogden for California. W. H. Mobley, the chief clerk, will take charge of the local office.

Charles B. Bills, president of the Pioneer company, and Henry M. Ellis, vice president of the same corporation, who have been visiting in various parts of the Utah fruit district, called at the local office this morning relative to the change of managers and found everything in a very satisfactory condition. The two officials will leave for Sacramento this evening.

President Bills, in speaking of the fruit situation this morning, stated that this state is just beginning to be recognized in the east as a fruit raising country and that more and more the markets of the east will be open to the products of Utah.

"The fruit of this district of Utah is the best in quality of any grown in the west," he said. "And with continued cultivation, proper care, spraying and judicious picking and packing, the fruit should be the finest offered to the trade."

Both of the fruit men will return to Ogden in December and spend considerable time in this vicinity in the interest of the Pioneer Fruit company.

The complaint alleges that the parties were married February 23, 1907, and that on February 24, the next day, Mrs. Murphy, against the will and consent of the plaintiff, deserted him and has since lived separate and apart from him. A decree of divorce is asked for.

THE UNSEEN AND THE UNHEARD

The primary colors shown in the rainbow vary from red to blue and violet; and the vibrations, or lengths of the light waves that give us violet grow shorter and shorter and at length give us red. These vibrations can be measured. One day, quite by chance, I came across the statement that there were innumerable light waves longer than those which give violet. At once the question sprang: were these longer waves represented by colors which we don't see, colors of which we can form no conception? And was the same thing true of the waves which, growing shorter and shorter, give us the sensation of red? There is room, of course, for myriads of colors beyond this extremity of our vision. A little study convinced me that my guess was right; for all the colors which we see are represented to our sense of feeling in degrees of heat; that is, blue shows one reading on the thermometer and red a higher reading; and by means of this new standard I discovered that man's range of vision is not even placed in the middle of the register of heat, but occupies a little space far up toward the warmer extremity of it. There are thousands of degrees of color lower than blue and hundreds of degrees of heat above red. All these gradations are doubtless represented by colors which no human eye can perceive, no human mind imagine. It is with sight as with sound. We know now that there are noises louder than thunder which we cannot hear, the roar that lies on the other side of silence. We men are poor, restless prisoners, hemmed in by our senses as by the walls of a cell, hearing only a part of nature's orchestra and that part imperfectly; seeing only a thousandth part of the color marvels about us and seeing that infinitesimal part incorrectly and partially—Frank Harris in The Forum.

GERMAN PHOTOGRAPHIC MATERIALS

The German Export Revue says that 95 per cent of the photographic chemicals consumed by the entire world is made and supplied by Germany. These chemicals and photographic paper, films, plates, cameras, etc., form an important line in Germany's export trade. Not a few of the manufacturers engaged therein export three-fourths of their total production. The Association of German Manufacturers of Photographic Articles, which has been compiled and published in four volumes, which, however, are only placed in the hands of members of the association, to be strictly treated as a confidential communication. These books also contain valuable information to exporters about the customs rates, etc., on photographic articles in all countries—Consular Report.

Thanksgiving Matinee at the Orpheum.
THE REVOLT OF THE HOG.

What is the matter with our hogs? They are not doing their duty by the country. They die frequently, but not often enough to provide the toothsome broiled bacon for the breakfast table of the humble. It is not so many years ago that bacon cost 10 cents a pound and was considered rather vulgar, only fit for the ignoble vulgar, while the rich ate spring chickens. Now bacon sells at 40 cents a pound and is getting into the aristocratic class along with terrapin.

Look also at scrapple. A generation ago it was the pride of Pennsylvania, one of its great claims to world-wide fame. No family so poor that it was not able to eat scrapple for breakfast in season, and often it furnished food for the supper table. Now it is getting into the luxurious class and is soon to appear on the menu of high-priced restaurants among the delicacies to tickle the palate after the opera. And as for sausage! We cannot speak of the subject without uncommon emotion. It is getting too dear.

The hog has done this, and he is pining up to his exorbitant reputation, which we did not presume that he understood ethically. The hog is either practicing race suicide or has gone on strike. Billed ham and cabbage are no more the basis of a wash-day dinner because we can't afford them. The pig is at the bottom of a conspiracy, and we think that the state department should send a man to Serbia to investigate the chances for improving the hog, since there he seems to have reached his highest development. In Serbia the hog is on, if not exactly his native heath, the place where he counts for most. Even the present king of Serbia is descended from a humble herdsman of hogs.

This, because during the centuries Serbia was under the Turk the Serf raised hogs and little else, since the Mohammedan would not eat pork, and so his goods were immune from seizure.

But the hog issue is closer at home. In the great and glorious West there must be many unimproved opportunities for making two pigs grow where now only one munches his corn. It is
